

MING-HUI (HAYDEN) CHOU

HIGH-SCHOOL STUDENT

ABOUT MYSELF

I am a student at an American private school in Taiwan. I am passionate about mechanical engineering and I dream of attending Georgia Tech University. I was born in Georgia, USA, and I lived there for 13 years before moving to Taiwan during the COVID-19 pandemic.

My father is skilled at many things, and he has taught me many important skills, such as plumbing, electrical work, and networking. This gave me an DIY mindset to try and learn to upgrade and fix anything I come across.

Interests

I am a technology enthusiast with a passion for learning how things work. I have always been fascinated by the inner workings of technology, and I love to take things apart to see how they are put together. This passion led me to learn how to build computers during my middle school years, and I have since built several computers for myself and my family.

Robotics

- My passion for robotics began in middle school, when my parents bought me a LEGO EV3 Mindstorms set. I had never touched robotics before, but I was immediately hooked. I joined a FIRST LEGO League (FLL) team and competed in my first robotics competition. It was an amazing learning experience, and I learned so much about robotics and engineering.
- In 10th grade, I transferred to my current high school and learned that there was a VEX robotics team. I joined the team and immediately got to work building a robot. After we competed in our first high school robotics competition, I felt more competitive than ever. I dedicated a lot of my time to learning about robotics.
